Aerial photo shows magnitude of construction job needed to provide docking facilities at mainland for new provincial government ferry service from Sidney. The Tsawwassen dock is connected to Point Roberts peninsula by two-mile-long, $3,000,000 causeway, required because of shallows. Construction, from sea to shore, was carried out by dredge operations and barge deposits of 3,000,000 cubic yards of fill. The dredge sucked up bottom sands and fed them through pipeline along course of the causeway. Breakwater to shield landing against prevailing winds is seen lower right. The bulge near tip of causeway allows parking of 140 cars and egress to fast-loading ferry slip. An administration building and machine shop also are located near the landing. Ferries MV Sidney, fitting out here, and MV Tsawwassen, at Vancouver, are expected to be in government service by June.

So it was Tuesday afternoon when Hon. Newton Steacy, our very earnest agriculture minister, displayed some of the posters he will use in his $150,000 advertising campaign for B.C. agriculture.

even when criticizing the government, she never departs She congratulated Premier Bennett on his budget speech and said how much she enjoyed his enthusiasm.

"He gave me some ideas for my household budgetting," Mrs. Haggen confided, "and I have trouble with budgets like most people."

Then, with immaculate technique, Mrs. Haggen followed compliment with criticism.

She reproved the government for not participating in World Refugee Year.

World Refugee Year.

"Sweden has taken 1,400 of these poor refugees and Belgium, though a small country, has taken 300," Mrs. Haggen said. "Yet this wealthy province was not willing to take even eight of the 100 families suggested by the federal government. "Surely this puts us to shame."

Mrs. Haggen pleaded for an escape from the "standard-ized" mind—the mind of the person who absorbs everything that is thrust at him and lacks the mental fortitude to ra-

She confessed she was not a TV fan.

"We get very good TV in Grand Forks, but alas, it all comes from the American side. I would be more interested if we could get the CBC, instead of the Three Stooges."

The Anger of Mr. Green

TO UNDERSTAND WHAT HAS A happened to Mr. Howard Green it is necessary to read the Hansard reports of Parliament's foreign policy debate—a task of half a day at least. That long, discursive record reveals two disquieting facts.

First, Mr. Diefenbaker has placed his foreign minister in a humiliating and painful position. Second, the foreign minister, evidently stung to the quick, has taken refuge in a bitter partisan attack on the Opposi-

These strange events began when the Liberals asked Mr. Green to indicate, in a general way, what policies Canada would advocate at the approaching disarmament conference. Mr. Green firmly refused to disclose this information, holding that it would be folly to show his cards before he entered another round in the long poker game with the Russians. The Liberals thought Mr. Green was wrong in withholding vital facts from Parliament but at least they knew where he stood.

Next day, however, Mr. Diefen-baker entered the debate and, with his unequalled sense of headline news, blandly outlined Canada's disarmament policy in pretty com-plete detail. The information sol-emnly refused by the foreign minis-ter was given freely by his chief. For reasons known only to himself, Mr. Diefenbaker had let Mr. Green down flat. The Liberals, naturally, lost no time in pointing out Mr. Green's humiliation and sympathizing with him, the most respected member of the Government. Their praise of his character in these peculiar circumstances could be nothing but gall to Mr. Green and he reacted with anger instead of wisdom, debate, and the Liberals had no chance to reply, he suddenly reverted to the methods of his Opposition days; denounced Mr. Pearson for "attacking NATO" (which Mr. Pearson had never done); warned Mr. Pearson to stop "baiting the British" (of which he was quite innocent); dragged up the irrelevant record of the late W. L. Mackenzie King as an isolationist; re-opened the old sore of the Suez crisis; and finlly accused the Liberal Party of historic subservience to the United

There is no point here in arguing the merits of Mr. Green's criticism which will be answered in Parliament at the first opportunity. But in the meanwhile it is sad and disquieting to see a foreign minister of the highest personal character suddenly abandoning that non-partisanship which happily has marked the annual foreign affairs debate in the past.

A foreign policy, to be strong, requires like no other policy strong support on all sides of Parliament. It should be, if possible, above the party confests and parliament manoeuvre of domestic politics.

Yet Mr. Green, and Mr. Green chose to turn the debate into a bitter display of partisanship after many months of judicial discretion, admired by all.

For this outburst Mr. Diefenbaker apparently is responsible but Mr. Green cannot escape his own responsibility. A man of his fine disposition will soon regret his mistake, no doubt has regretted it already. His admirers throughout the nation, and in all parties, will regret it still more.

Song of the Northland

SINCE THE END OF THE WAR, Canadians have been singing the song of the northland in fine voice. Politicians have been pointing with pride to the vast riches there. Scientists and surveyors have noted the extent of many of our frozen assets.

There seems to be no question of the existence of this wealth, There are supplies of timber south of the sub-Arctic treeline, of iron, uranium, copper, nickel and other resources.

There is, however, a very considerable difference between recognizing this wealth and converting it into merchantable products. Before it is sold, markets have to be found.

Eventually there will be a de-mand for the riches of the north. There already is in some respects. The iron deposits of northern Quebec are yielding their substance and there are other projects evolving as commercial undertakings. But the development of the north is not going to be hurried. It should not be, with the expenditure of capital that can be applied better elsewhere in the nation.

As the Montreal Gazette points out, "Canada's Northland has a great future. There can be no doubt of this. But we must not be overly sanguine as to the pace at which its development will occur. Leadership, initiative and a sense imaginative reality are the qualities the times require.'

No need to ignore that part of our country. By all means let the authorities follow up their excellent mapping with other explorations surveys. On the other hand, let's not expect all routes north to look like the Chilkoot Pass in '98. Exploitation will await the development of markets. And what is in the ground now will not move away if we do not harvest it immediately

AS residents of a gardening city, Victorians will have a special sympathy dentified specimens, come from goodfor the citizens of Mobile, Alabama, who ness knows where with the load of have run into a little trouble with their early spring planting. They planted a fivemillion-dollar court house and some expensive. landscaping pensive. landscaping and they got a quarter-acre of young turnip greens. The news litem says the crop also includes the court house and the land-scaping, which makes the area a little crowded. That know how the building crowded. They know how the building got there, of course, but nobody seems to know how the turnips arrived. And nobody is telling.

There is a deep undercurrent of human experience here. This is the sort of thing that could happen to anybody, not merely court house builders but any reputable garden loving citizen.

As court house builders we may have this very thing happen to us a few months from now. Having planted our building tirm on Cathedral Hill, who knows what many come up along with it? But as plain home gardeners, it could happen to us any time. And has.

Probable Returns

Take the hopeful fellow who wheels topsoil, rakes, rolls, fills, flattens and finally sows a lawn. Naturally, having bought grass seed at a dollar or more a pound and carefully distributed it over the soil, smoothed it lightly, watered it, loved it, cursed it and watched it daily like a robin looking for worms—natur-like a robin looking for worms—natur-ally. I say, he expects grass to come up. Well, grass does, you have to admit that. But equally naturally, in fact more so, other things come up too. Not court houses necessarily, and certainly not landscaping. No, what comes up first, last and in between is chickweed, dandelions, thistles, chick-word absenses of the contract of the contract.

eed, sheepsorrel, clover, and chick-

The Kentucky blue, the crawling bent and the slithering fescue may be in there somewhere too, but they're out of sight and very soon out of pocket. They just haven't got a chance with the other virile, thrusting, crowding, surging, springing vegetation,

For a long time such grass as sur-vives will live like a poor relation of the rich growth around it, each pitiful blade existing from day to day with more of hope than humus to sustain it.

Eventually, of course, the situation ecomes better. After gallons of weedkiller and grass encourager have been sprinkled on the plot, the grass assem-bles a quorum of blades and even attains majority representation among the greenery.

Hand Work

It is at this point that the chemicals and sprays seem to lose their effect. From here on it is every blade for itself and the gardener take the hindmost. The patient lawn grower will spend hours on his knees and other facades of his being, picking and pluck-ing every broad leaf he can find and regretting each blade of grass that inad-vertently is removed along with its unwanted neighbor.

From some dedicated gardeners, of course, the grass gets its daily watering with mathematical regularity. By others is almost as regularly neglected. But the average gardener hovers between these states.

On some days he is a dedicated gardener, but on others he is an "other." Thus it happens that the young lawn becomes accustomed to being drowned one day and desiccated the next.

This naturally weeds out the unfit blades and permits only the strong and worthy ones to survive. It is good training for them. Soon they will know

Other weeks, when different in-terests lure the proprietor, they will reach luxuriously for the sky, present-ing a lush, slowly waving mat of green to the vagrant winds and building up a situation which only scythe or clippers will relieve. This is population explosion at its most elemental

An Intruder

It is about this time that the lawn grower will notice, with considerable pleasure, that some parts of the lawn seem to be easier to cut than others. The general green expanse is there, but the nature of the surface has changed subtly. Peering more closely some day, he will observe that a new green has taken over. The grass is being displaced in ever widening areas by a newcomer. MOSS newcomer-MOSS

When about half the lawn has turned to moss, the problem has to be admitted and faced: Revert to grass or convert

There is much to be said for the latter course. The moss is pretty to look at, it is quiet and unassuming, AND IT DOESN'T NEED CUTTING.

On the other hand must be considered the scoffs of gardening neighbors, the bother of explaining continually that you LIKE moss better than grass that's why, and the problem of what to do with the now-rusting lawnmower. You can't sell the mower because you have a feeling that you are going to have to do something about the moss sooner or later—that, in fact, you're going to have to go all through this lawn-birth and lawn-raising procedure. once again next year.

OTTAWA:

Mr. Speaker!

By MAURICE WESTERN

PARLIAMENT has witnessed the unusual spectacle of the government being thrown off balance on two successive days by rulings of Mr. Speaker Michenes. Both epi-sodes involve touchy matters of a character to irritate the increasingly restless Conservative back-bench ers. Early in Feb-ruary Mr. McIlraith, an Ottawa Liberal, moved for production of the Civil Service Commission's report on pay increases. Mr.

Fleming has taken the position that the report is confidential, though he did not sitate in 1958 to buttress his position by reference to an earlier report recom mending no changes He claimed on Monday that such documents were made in pursuance of the provisions of the Civil Service Act to the government through the minister of finance. This being so the government was entitled to take the position that disclosure would not be in the public interest and the Opposition would have to accept this without debate or division.

But Mr. McIlraith argued that the report was of a very special nature. The Civil Service Commission was set up as an independent body answerable not to the government of the day but to Par-liament. The report did not come to the minister as a departmental document in a field for which he had responsibility. He was merely a "vehicle for Parlia-ment" and could no more withhold the report than he could withhold that of the auditor-general.

Although Mr. Speaker, in his ruling, was careful to explain that his jurisdiction did not extend to constitutional matters, he found in effect that Mr. Mc-Ilraith's point had substance.

Official Possession

"If we agree," he said, "that the recommendations of the Civil Service Commis are to be submitted to the sion . governor-in-council and that the minister of finance is only the vehicle, this document is now officially in the posses of the governor in council and should be asked for from that source."

This ruling greatly increased the gov-ernment's embarrassment. Mr. Fleming has now, in effect, been forced into the position of affirming a constitutional right to withhold information which may said to be the property of Parlia ment. And this stand has been formally endorsed by the Conservative majority in a division of the House.

The second incident was the bizarre affair of the doctored "Hansard"; the victim, the Prime Minister himself.

The offending document, which bore on its face a photostatic reproduction of the Hansard cover, complete with coat of arms, the Speaker's name and authority of the Queen's printer, had been circulated in an avowed attempt to create a climate favorable to trading stamps,

It gave pride of place to a pro-stamp peech by a Conservative member, Miss Margaret Aitken. But a good many Conservative members regard the stamps as they would the plague.

They were, moreover, in receipt of a protest from the Retail Merchants' Association noting that Miss Byrne Hope Sanders, the consultant who hit upon this novel mis-use of Hansard, is one of the proprietors of the Gallup Poll, which has lately interested itself-unfairly according to the retailers-in this particu-Mr. Diefenbaker was thus in a posi-

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN Americans Like England

that ever-recurring scene of a Canadian voman, resident here for a number of years and having devoted much of that time to moaning about life in this country, dissolved in tears at the news that her husband (and naturally she with him) had been transferred back to Canada.

I thought about her when reading some views expressed by a group of well-known Anglo-Ameri-

Reyburn cans. These well-known Americans, having lived here so long and being so taken with life here as to have the 'Anglo" automatically tagged on, mentioned these pros and cons:

Larry Backman, European chief of one the big Hollywood movie companies There is an agonizing baptism—usually six months to a year—when everything goes wrong. Your inefficiency irritates us, your lack of hygiene appals us, and your brussels sprouts make us sick at the stomach.

"Yet once past this horrifying initiation, we are usually here for keeps. Having been here with my family for five years, I don't see us ever moving. It has everything that California has except the sun."

William Caldwell, editor of the new paper. The London American: "For ballet, opera, music and straight theatre, England is a delight. But not so those tinkly, emasculated British musicals. However, as long as you know you're going to amateur night you'll have a ball."

* * *
Fleur Cowles, founder 10 years ago of that ill-fated U.S. magazine Flair and now wife of a British timber millionaire:

"I like England because there is not that element of contest that can make life in the U.S. so nerve-wracking. A disadvantage in England is that I can never get anything done on time. But after all, what is time?"

Carl Foreman, U.S. film producer who wrote High Noon: "I remember how surprised I was the first time here in England a taxi driver bawled me out. I'd already been living here five years.

There's a kind of sweetness here. And it's a man's country. Living is geared to the male; women here seem more grateful. You see, America is woman-ridden."

SLIGHT RAY OF HOPE FOR TELEVISION FANS

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (CP) — There's a lot of behind-the-scenes talk about having the Canada-Russia final game of the Olympic hockey tournament Sunday televised by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation although the Columbia Broadcasting System holds exclusive rights

CBS is reported to have turned down requests by the CBC to televise the game. Gordon Juckes. Melville, Sask., president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, says he hopes to see CBS officials today with other hockey men and Jack Taylor, Progressive Conservative MP for Vancouver Burgard.

"If they convince us it is impossible for CBC to tele-vise the game, we'll probably drop the matter," he said.
"It not, we might go through political channels in Ottawa, "It all depends on the answer we get."

Home Rivalry Would Be Aid In Medal Hunt

By BILL WESTWICK (Special to The Times)

SQUAW VALLEY-Time is running out on Canada's chances of collecting any skiing medals at these Winter Games

Ottawa's Anne Heggtveit Tuesday made a quick change of pace after travelling the icy upper stretches of the women's giant slalom and made a finishing effort that seemed the equal, if not better than most, of this galaxy of stars. But Canada's outstanding contender for honors in the alpine division couldn't recover the lost ground on the upper slopes of this heavily-gated 5,997-foot course, a vertical drop of 1,814 feet.

On the lower course, Miss

Heggtveit put on a tremendous effort to recapture the time lost when she had attempted to follow the pre-race instructions to "follow the line of fall" in this thrilling race against the clock and the world's best women skiers.

It was a gallant and highly impressive finish, but only good enough for 12th position even though only 2.2 seconds back of the winning time posted by another of the wiss stars, Yvonne Ruegg.

SPORTS DIARY

By JIMMY CANNON

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico-Poverty is the reward for habitual horse playing and the shorts never instigated joy in any one except the saints. Rare is the horse player who doesn't believe he is persecuted by jockeys.

No one cherishes a guy who sends him to the shylocks. It is logical that the players turn their rages on the jocks. They're abused more than any other sports performers. But at El Commandante the players are giving Eduardo Rodriquez a pass.

I don't know how long pity will purify their normally spiteful dispositions but for the last two weeks they have conspicuously demonstrated their compassion for Rodriquez. They realize every race may be his final one.

I was in a box when the field obeyed the bugler's call and came into view of the crowd. The hand-clapping began when they identified a colt named Chico. Not since Silky Sullivan was perpetrating his hoax have I heard a horse honored as it went to the post. I asked the guy with me what was the reason for the ovation.

A story went with it. Chico didn't matter. They were saluting Eduardo Rodriquez, who, after being afoot for three years, had his first mount.

It was a beautiful sound to hear at a race track because greed generally provokes all noises uttered by horse players. This was a gift from the players to Eduardo Rodriquez, who now has a silver plate to cover a hole in his skull. Chico. Jinished third and the applause lasted until he slid off Chico's back and weighed in.

Anyone would lay a price that Rodriguez would be in the horse business. He was born on the grounds of the old track and his father, who now handles the Louisana Stables, was a trainer. His sister, although women are prevented from holding a trainer's ticket, also has the gift. She walks her old man's hots and exercises the string in the

The big talent is being small and Eddie was glad because he was stunted. He was riding horses when most kids are being cautioned not to be reckless on their scooters. It never occurred to him that he would make a living any other way. At 18, Eduardo got his bug and rode as an apprentice at this track.

Eddie Rode to the Top Quickly

Leading jocks make $25,000 here where they race three Leading jocks make $25,000 here where they race three times a week every month of the tropical year. They get no mount fees, as they are paid in most places, but take down 15 instead of the 10 per cent of their winnings. One per cent goes into a pool which is divided evenly every month between every boy with a locker in the jocks' room.

It appeared that Eddie had it made! In less than three months, riding three times a week, Rodriquez won 25 times. Of course, the players depunyed him from the self-eddies.

months, riding three times a week, Rodriquez won 25 times. Of course, the players denounced him from the safety of the stands when he lost. But he was famous in the cafes and people he didn't know picked up his tabs.

They considered him a boy shaped for greatness, but a horse chucked him and he fell on his head. He was recuperating when he was brought to a hospital with his skull caved in.

The circumstances aren't clear. He won't discuss it. But someone hit him with a baseball bat. He tells friends that it happened while he was scuffling playfully with an unnamed relative.

It was very bad. They sent him to New York and they put the plate in his head. He was lucky to be alive. The docs told him he would never ride again. They suggested he learn a trade like watchmaking. He came back and moped around the stables, his old man's barn, despondent and afoot. Six months ago his old man put him on a horse and he breezed him. Two and a halt years is a long time to be on the ground. But the physicians of the Puerio Rico Racing Commission refused to give him a rider's ticket. He pleaded with them but they turned him down and laid on a little con to pacify him. But their tender refusal didn't buy any groceries far Rodriquez's wife and kid.

He refused to believe them. His life would be meaning-groceries for Rodriquez's wife and kid.

He refused to believe them. His life would be meaningless unless he could function at his trade. He wrote the big doctor in New York who had operated on him and told him how it was. It was like being dead.

The letter was persuasive. Of course, Eduardo is in jeopardy every time he rides a horse. Another fall might kill him. But, the doctor wrote the Racing Commission, that the film. But, the doctor wrote the Racing Commission, that race riding would be a form of therapy for this boy with the flawed skull. He suggested they gike him a licence.

So Eddie is back working at the only job he ever had. The mounts come slow. Trainers are hesitant about using him. But Eduardo Rodriquez is a jockey again. He has never been anything else but jocks must ride to prove what they are.

Pennies for Peggy' Fund Closes as Objectives Attained

The episode of the Queen's statue appears to have ended more or less satisfactorily to everyone

With all objectives achieved in less than a week, the "Pennies for Peggy" campaign launched by the Times last Tuesday was brought to an end

The movement was started to bring to a head the payment to sculptress Peggy Walton Packard if this were paid by the city to raise further funds for landscaping around the statue in Beacon Hill

Within the week City Hall has sent a $300 cheque to Peggy Packard and parks chairman Millard Mooney has ordered installation of the statue in Beacon Hill with a suitable landscaping job.

That the public enjoyed the campaign was evident. They took the "pennies" slogan literally and something between 5,000 and 6,000 pennies were contributed-the exact total is still to be reckoned.

In addition, a private firm, Barker Landscaping, offered through the fund to donate $250 worth of landscaping services for the project. This offer is still open if the city wishes to accept it. If it is turned down, the firm says it is willing to donate the work to Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

The interjection of what has been termed a college prank—removal of the bust from City Hall in a neatly-timed night raid and its return over the weekend—had nothing to do with the campaign, but provided a surprise sidelight.

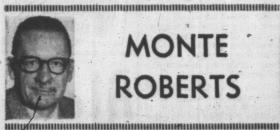

When the pennies have been counted and packaged they will be presented to City Hall as the public's token on behalf of the artist and the project to honor the Queen's visit here last year.

Official Bid Asked On Thetis

Bring It to a Head Move Urged on Takeover by B.C.

City council will be asked to offer formally its 1,200-acre Thetis Lake property to the government for development as a provincial park.

Ed Lohbrunner, president of Thetis Lake Nature Sanctuary Association, today said his organization will send the request.

"That will bring it to a head and the whole matter rests on council's decision." he said.

Mr. Lohbrunner said he had discussed the situation with department of recreation and servation officials, joining the watershed for a provincial park. But that wouldn't be large enough for park development by itself so the government would have to be able to the would have to be able to the water would have to be able to the water would have to be able to the water wa

Big Night! Ike's Trip, 7.30; Playhouse 90, 8; Revue, Steel, 10 By PHIL LEE, Times TV Editor

SUMMING UP-Monday night Bob Hope staged what charitably might be defined as one of his less satisfying efforts on television this season.

Reasons for this dip-or was it a drop?-from the comedy heights usually associated with Hope might be attributed to three factors—one, the show was taped; two, Ginger Rogers and, three, Jimmy Dealing with these factors one by one I would says suggest that Miss Rogers should stick to drama. In $1.88 $1.88 $1.89 this sort of thing she is no match for several of the younger dancers and singers whose talents far exceed those of Fred Astaire's former dancing partner.

As for Mr. Demaret, he should stick to the golf links on which he reigns as a star. Before the TV cameras he comes fairly close to resembling a favorite sandwich filler.

And now to the taping: If taping is necessary n surely the program can be taped as a whole instead of in segments such as appeared to be the case Monday night. The segmenting, in my mind, causes loss of continuity and, without it, the required over-all atmosphere or mood.

On the credit side, however, was Hope's opening phologue that was as topical as Jack Paar, Presiden Eisenhower and the TV writers' strike. I also enjoyed 188 Economy fir shiplap.

Per modern aerosol pressure can. Somehow it seeme a far, far cry from the days of Charlie Chaplin and the custard pies.

And, before closing, a rave for Mr. Cox. As a comedian I think he is a very funny man and clever, too, as evinced in his mad rendition of the "Running Bear' song. I hope the former Mr. Peepers and Hiram Holiday will soon attempt another venture.

* * ED SULLIVAN is flying higher and higher in the ratings this season and if anyone wonders why I hope they picked up the Jerome Robbins' ballet Sun-day evening. Ballet—with its required precision and split-second timing—is difficult enough but when as "The Changing American Woman Over Three humor is injected so that the "wrong" moves have to Centuries." Miss Lillie is a caparet star who is "Weary be timed to the "right" ones and vice versa it must of It Al be all the more difficult. Personally I could have sketches watched Robbins' dancers take up the entire time,

This is the sort of thing Sullivan offers that you can't seem to get anywhere else.

And, incidentally, it was good to have the Ed Sulli-Show piped in on Channel 6 for the first time. This should be especially appreciated by those who live in rooms and, therefore, have no outlet for a roof antenna.

The Olympics Sunday? As far as my family was concerned the three hours devoted to the men's giant slalom and the 60 metre jump was a privilege. Heaven only knows when we will have the opportunity again unless they fathom international TV within the next

Genuine, Dedicated Artistry

There was a time when New World concert audiences tended to regard duo piamists in the light of a pleasurable novelty, rather than as serious artists.

Admittedly too, celebrated teams of 20 or so years ago gave credence to the idea by playing programs of slick, bedizened arrangements and only a modicum of anything of a more profound nature.

But artist duettists like Bartlett and Robertson and our own Robin Wooff and his wife. But artist duettists like Bartlett and Robertson and our own Robin Wooff and his wife. Aerial photo shows magnitude of construction job needed to provide docking facilities at mainland for new provincial governprovide docking racilities at maintain for new provincial government ferry service from Sidney. The Tsawwassen dock is connected to Point Roberts peninsula by two-mile-long, $3,000,000 causeway, required because of shallows. Construction, from sea to shore, was carried out by dredge operations and barge deposits of 3,000,000 cubic yards of fill. The dredge sucked up bottom sands and fed them through pipeline along course of the causeway. Breakwater to shield landing against prevailing winds is seen lower right. The bulge near tip of causeway allows parking of cars and egress to fast-loading ferry slip. An administration building and machine shop also are located near the landing. Ferries MV Sidney, fitting out here, and MV Tsawwassen, at Vancouver, are expected to be in government service by June.

Pennies for Peggy' Fund Closes as Objectives Attained

The episode of the Queen's statue appears to have ended more or less satisfactorily to everyone

With all objectives achieved in less than a week, the "Pennies for Peggy" campaign launched by the Times last Tuesday was brought to an end

The movement was started to bring to a head the payment to sculptress Peggy Walton Packard for her work on the bust of Queen Elizabeth; and if this were paid by the city to raise further funds for landscaping around the statue in Beacon Hill

Within the week City Hall has sent a $300 cheque to Peggy Packard and parks chairman Millard Mooney has ordered installation of the statue in Beacon Hill with a suitable landscaping job.

That the public enjoyed the campaign was evident. They took the "pennies" slogan literally and something between 5,000 and 6,000 pennies were contributed-the exact total is still to be reckoned.

In addition, a private firm, Barker Landscaping, offered through the fund to donate $250 worth of landscaping services for the project. This offer is still open if the city wishes to accept it. If it is turned down, the firm says it is willing to donate the work to Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

The interjection of what has been termed a college prank—removal of the bust from City Hall in a neatly-timed night raid and its return over the weekend—had nothing to do with the campaign, but provided a surprise sidelight.

When the pennies have been counted and packaged they will be presented to City Hall as the public's token on behalf of the artist and the project to honor the Queen's visit here last year.

MONTE ROBERTS

Will some kindly constituent be so kind as to help me get my money's worth out of a parking ticket?

This parking ticket I acquired by the simple process of parking my little black automobile in the spot behind the City Hall reserved for Ald. G. Edgelow.

Now, I am quite sure Ald. G. Edgelow has no objection to me parking my little black car in his parking

In fact, I am positive Aid. G. Edgelow realizes he is welcome to park his horse in my barn anytime (if I had a barn) and takes the same tolerant attitude toward my

Nevértheless, to park an unauthorized vehicle in the parking lot behind the City Hall is extremely illegal, and thus I collected the wages of sin, namely, a park-What was written on the parking ticket motivated me to see if I could get my money's worth out of it.

Because the ticket cited me for parking on the

Now, you might say I had learned something, and Now, you might say I had learned something, and therefore received my money's worth for the parking

But a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

What I wish to know now, is, WHY is it called Everybody knows, of course, that Fiddler's Green is the mythical paradise awaiting all good sailors.

It's defined in Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable as; "Fiddler's Green—the land of sailors where there is perpetual mirth, a fiddle that never ceases playing to untiring dancers, plenty of grog, and unlimited tobacco."

But what, I ask you, has this to do with the area be-hind the City Hall?

Where in the distant past did Victoria's Fiddler's Green get its name? Who named it? Why?

I do hope some kindly constituent can come up with the answers, because then I would feel I got my money's worth out of the parking ticket.

Especially as I could telephone the provincial archives and let them know. The archives would like the answers,
